HELLO AND WELCOME

From the Editor

I would like to thank everyone who helped by sending in articles for the ASTCC newsletter. It makes for interesting reading and I hope everyone will enjoy this edition.

GOODBYE TURK, RIP

Written by: Diane Duffy

Ch/Intl Ch Epicure's Hollywood Knight TD - "TURK" June 30, 2002 - June 8, 2016

He was a beloved dog, show champion and St John Ambulance Therapy Dog volunteer, named after the character in the movie "Hollywood Knights". Turk passed away on June 8th, just shy of his 14th birthday.

He was Nancy Halford's first AmStaff who she describes as a big bundle of muscle love and he loved playing the clown. His trademark move was to get down on the ground and in a submissive bow when other dogs approached which embarrassed Nancy's husband but enamoured other people to the breed. He was a true representation of excellent temperament for the American Staffordshire Terrier, alert, attentive, courageous, never backing down but rock solid with people and other animals alike. He was raised with 3 children in the family and changed a lot of people's minds about the breed, something that Nancy will always be thankful for.

Turk was the whole package, a joy to have around and will be deeply missed.

DOG LEGISLATION COUNCIL OF CANADA

Head of Research for the Dog Legislation Council of Canada – Steve Barker

We have been asked to update you with the latest information about breed specific legislation throughout Canada.

Starting on the West Coast in British Columbia, we've had a few attacks lately that have been identified as "pit bulls". Whether they were dogs similar in appearance to the purebreds or mixed breed dogs did not matter once the newspapers published their stories. In the public's mind, these dogs were "pit bulls".

Three of the most high profiles cases last year were initially called "pit bulls" by the media but were later identified by Animal Control personnel as breed mixes that did not fit the "pit bull" category. It is rare that corrections are made reflecting these errors.

Organizations like HugABull and the BC SPCA have had success in BC getting BSL repealed in numerous municipalities. In fact, Coquitlam and New Westminster now have some of the most progressive and effective animal control legislation in the country.

Surrey, which has been BSL-free for the past sixteen years, has been the scene of some of these latest incidents and the new mayor is feeling pressure to do something. This may or may not involve breed-specific changes to their bylaw. At this point, we have no idea, but her wording was not particularly encouraging. It does not seem, at this point, that Christy Clark, the premier of the province, has any interest in pursuing province-wide BSL.

Alberta has a lot of small municipalities with their own individual breed restrictions and bans. Justice for Bullies, based out of Langdon, has persuaded two cities in the past year to repeal their breed-specific language. There does not seem to be any talk right now of BSL at a provincial level.

The same is true for Saskatchewan. This may be because both Alberta and Saskatchewan have very powerful and effective dangerous dog legislation in place at the provincial level.

Manitoba is a bit of a mess. The majority of the province is breed-neutral, but Winnipeg has some of the most draconian breed-specific legislation in the country. Half the people in the province live inside the boundaries of Winnipeg, so even though there is no provincial ban, the legislation affects plenty of Manitoba residents. There is a group that is growing in Winnipeg that is dedicated to eradicating this legislation, which is believed to be the oldest in Canada (1990) and was a model for Ontario's ban in 2005. We are hoping to see some positive movement in Winnipeg soon. They have a relatively new Animal Services director and a new director of their humane society, so let's cross our fingers and see what happens there. For your information, nobody is allowed to enter Winnipeg with a "pit bull", which of course includes the typical three purebreds plus any dogs with similar appearance. This includes visitors and people wanting to drive through. The same is true for the province of Ontario.

JUNE 2016 NEWSLETTER

American Staffordshire Terrier Club of Canada

Ontario is a disaster, of course. Eleven years after their ban, stories abound of dogs being seized for looking a certain way. There are no legal options left in our fight there and any attempts to introduce legislative bills to change this law have been blocked by the government. Since the Ontario Liberal Party has a majority government, our only hope is that the next election in June of 2018 sends them packing, so that either the NDP or the Conservatives can get in there. Both of those parties have promised, multiple times, to repeal the breed ban if they are elected.

We'll come back to Québec in a minute.

Nova Scotia is heating up a little bit, thanks to the efforts of a Halifax radio shock jock host named Rick Howe. He's been pushing for a breed ban since the events in Québec and is trying his best to fan the flames of public fear. It doesn't seem that his efforts are swaying the politicians, yet. We have good people in Nova Scotia who are on top of this issue, so I don't expect that province to fall anytime soon.

The other Maritime provinces seem to be staying quiet. We'll know more about the reactions of politicians in all of the provinces, both East and West, as the Québec situation progresses. With the people that we have in Nova Scotia and the president of the Dog Legislation Council of Canada living in Newfoundland, we have the Maritimes covered well.

Now to Québec. All signs point to Québec turning into another Ontario. There were a few bite incidents and attacks, some very serious and one involving the death of a lady in Montréal. The coroner's report on her death won't be available until September but the assumption has been that the dog killed her.

The media snowball effect (where all they can talk about is "pit bulls") is in full swing. We are seeing city after city promising to enact breed restrictions as quickly as possible. Just like Ontario, it has reached the point here that anything that involves a bite, no matter how small, by a dog that someone, somewhere, might be able to call a "pit bull", is immediately reported and rehashed. We are also seeing physical attacks on, and poisonings of, family pets as the media and politicians create fear among those who believe what they see on TV or in the newspapers.

Within days of the latest incidents, Brossard promised to ban pit bulls, subject to a city council vote. Then Québec City announced their intention to implement a ban that will require anyone in the city who already owns a "pit bull" to get rid of it by January 1, 2017. Shortly after that, the premier of Québec said he was going to look into enacting province-wide BSL. Immediately after the provincial announcement, the mayor of Montréal announced plans to ban "pit bulls", allowing existing dogs to stay, with city council scheduled to vote on the issue in September. Both the mayor of Montréal and the Premier of Québec indicated that they might possibly add other breeds, with the mayor mentioning the history of the Doberman, the German Shepherd, and the Rottweiler. People on social media have been listing other breeds as well, but we have seen nothing from lawmakers other than the above mentioned ones.

This announcement caused the Montréal SPCA to issue a press release stating that they will use all of their resources, including legal, to fight this legislation. The move was also denounced by one of Montréal's most high-profile civil rights lawyers, Anne-France Goldwater, who took the government to task on live television.

There's a lot going on in the province and much of the information is contradictory and confusing. We have people on the ground in Montréal who are meeting with all of the key players. The premier and the mayors of Québec City and Montréal have been meeting with all sorts of organizations and experts and are expected to meet with representatives from the Canadian Kennel Club. The CKC was fully on board fighting the Ontario ban and their information and resources were very helpful during that time, so it is going to be important once again for them to use their reputation as the national registry in order to gain the attention of the decision-makers.

JUNE 2016 NEWSLETTER

American Staffordshire Terrier Club of Canada

We'll find out more over the next week or so as all of these different groups sit down with the politicians and try to get answers. Our biggest worry with Québec, besides the obvious one of not wanting to see a ban in that province at all and not wanting to see dogs killed just for their looks, is that it will encourage those provinces that are sitting on the fence to jump to the wrong side. We believe BC and Nova Scotia are watching the Québec situation closely and may follow suit if Québec falls.

Purebred dogs are almost always included in any BSL in Canada, even though the number of actual purebreds of these breeds is tiny. Of course, all laws involving purebreds also include the phrases "and mixes" or "and any dog with similar physical appearance".

The breed standards from the CKC, AKC, UKC, and ADBA are being used as definitions of the ideal "pit bull" in order to judge the physical attributes of confiscated mixed breed dogs. Some municipalities specifically exempt CKC-registered dogs but this is rare. In the past, registries have tried to use legal means to get the government to stop using their copyrighted breed standards, but these were unsuccessful.

It has been our experience that the three most popular purebred dogs to be targeted are the American Staffordshire Terrier, the Staffordshire Bull Terrier, and the American Pit Bull Terrier (which, although not a CKC or AKC breed, is most definitely a registered breed with the UKC and ADBA). Additional "bully type" dogs that are often included are the Bull Terrier and the American Bulldog. Other banned or restricted purebreds across Canada include: Akita; Bouvier; Doberman; Mastiff (one law says Mastiff group!); Presa Canario; Rhodesian Ridgeback; and Rottweiler.

It's difficult to find all the bans and restrictions in Canada. We have an extensive map of BSL across Canada (209 entries with bylaws cited and a link) but there is not yet any list that covers every city and town with BSL. Each has to be individually investigated.

One of the things that purebred dog owners need to keep in mind is that, because the government can prove, beyond any doubt, that the dog is a purebred, these dog owners can't use the argument of inaccurate breed identification available to owners of mixed breed dogs. This means that, in Ontario and some of the cities across Canada, if you get caught owning or breeding one of the purebreds (or even visiting / passing through with one), you can be convicted much more easily than the owner of a mixed breed dog. You are guilty because of the pedigree that proves breed.

For the moment, we're watching to see how the discussions go in Québec, in both the province and the cities. We're hoping that cooler heads will prevail and that the decision-makers will heed the advice of the experts.

CKC OFFERS ALTERNATIVE TO PROPOSED BREED-SPECIFIC LEGISLATION IN QUEBEC

Following announcements by officials proposing breed-specific legislation in the province of Quebec, Quebec City, Montreal and Brossard, CKC has contacted Quebec policy makers to offer our expertise and assistance in the development of legislation that is reasonable, enforceable and non-discriminatory.

As a result, CKC, represented by Linda St-Hilaire, CKC Board Director for Quebec, will be meeting with Ministre Coiteux cabinet staff and Patrick Voyer from Ville de Quebec in the next week.

CKC supports appropriate dangerous dog legislation that serves to protect the public and opposes breed-specific legislation—which penalizes the breed and not the deed.

CKC legislative policy statements concerning breed-specific and dangerous dog legislation, and responsible dog ownership can be viewed here.

Updates will be posted to our website as new information becomes available

REGIONAL CONVERSATIONS

Ontario Region - Lori Gray, Ontario

As I sit down to write this piece for the newsletter, I have a fresh anger stewing within my being.

Quebec has had another DBRF (dog bite related fatality) and without a report being made public on the cause of death or any reports of whom or how the "breed" of the dog was determined, the dog that attacked the woman was deemed a "pit bull".

- Quebec City Mayor Régis Labeaume announced as of Jan. 1, 2017, "It will be forbidden for anyone to keep or have this kind of dog," pit bulls.
- Pit bull owners have six months to respect the regulations and get rid of their dogs.

JUNE 2016 NEWSLETTER

American Staffordshire Terrier Club of Canada

- "We're banning pit bulls because they are particularly aggressive and unpredictable dogs, known for inflicting serious injuries," the mayor said in a written statement.

Insanely, our breed is lumped into this mess of ignorance.

The list of banned breeds in Quebec City includes:

- Bull terriers.
- Staffordshire bull terriers.
- American pit bull terriers.
- American Staffordshire terriers.
- Any mix with these breeds.

Why is it that in the US there are now over 20 states that have scrapped BSL at state level yet here in Canada BSL is still sought out as a quick knee jerk response with high profile media stories?

There have been 4 other DBRF's in Quebec since 1964, none of which were attributed to a "pit bull" or similar. Since the worst outcome from a dog attack is death, why do the others not matter?

Why do large portions of Canada still want to take the road to insanity and ban 3 of the rarest breeds in Canada every time someone deems a dog a "pit bull" (ignorant speak for any dog that looks scary)?

The CKC nationwide numbers for our breed for the past 3 years have been;

- 2013 34 dogs
- 2014 58 dogs
- 2015 37 dogs

Now my math skills leave a bit to be desired but... Really?

Our breed continues to be in serious jeopardy and the threat of BSL in another province is horrifying.

I apologize for the downer but I really can't see past this issue to report any other current news from Ontario at this time.

Saskatchewan Region – Whitney Weston, Maidstone, SK

I'm so happy to be writing my first contribution for this newsletter finally!

We have been busy with Rally, CGNs, ADBA shows and all the Weight Pulls, Nosework, Barn Hunt and other events going on in SK and AB! We want to get everyone as involved as possible in these things and keep our dogs busy while putting out great representation for our breed and dogs themselves! Please don't hesitate to reach out to me at any time for any more information on these awesome sports and groups of people!

We have been in contact with the Lloydminster Kennel and Obedience Club as well as the SK CKC rep and are waiting to hear back about potential for a sanction match as one of the last things to be completed on our requirements to get full club approval! We will be pressuring this heavily and moving forward with it for you all to benefit from!

We here in SK are working hard with Justice for Bullies based in Alberta to keep an eye on the boiling BSL scene that has recently exploded. We know and have proof this is not the way to legislate dogs, or provide safety for anyone. We encourage anyone possible to get involved in this matter and go forward with trying to negate this.

That's all we have for now - until next time - Love your dogs!
